A loving man of faith, Jim Rothnie died peacefully on Tuesday, July 21, 2015, in Stanwood, Washington.

James Rothnie
History, Athletics

Always passionate about athletics, it became a way of life for him. He grew up playing all school sports and was a standout varsity basketball and baseball player at Franklin High School. He continued his education at the University of Washington earning a BS and MA degree in Public Education. Jim began his teaching career in 1952 in Leavenworth, Washington, where he taught physical education, health and history and coached football, basketball and baseball. He took his talents to the Edmonds School District in 1954 where he taught the same subjects but traded football for track in his coaching responsibilities.

In 1958 Jim accepted the position of Athletic Director in Edmonds and held the position for 28 years until his retirement in 1986. Jim was voted the Washington State Athletic Director of the year in 1983. In addition, Jim served on several Washington Interscholastic Activities Association (WIAA) committees and was a member and later president of the Northwest Interscholastic Board. He was a steadfast believer in self-discipline and felt teaching its principles should be the primary goal of any athletic program. He inspired both players and coaches with this philosophy.

Jim was first and foremost a family man. He married Dorothy Jean Barger, his high school sweetheart, in 1950. Together they raised six children, five girls and a boy. Athletics transcended his home life as well. He organized softball games played in the front yard with his own and neighborhood children. Peach trees had been planted strategically to serve as bases. Team work, sportsmanship and a love for the game blossomed under his tutelage.

Jim was very proud of his Scottish heritage. He continued a family tradition started by his mother and gifted relatives, friends and neighbors at Christmas with a dozen Scotch Shortbread cookies he had made himself. For Jim family times were the best of times. An opportunity to be together for holidays and birthdays or just because was never missed. He enjoyed this closeness up until the very end of his life.
